WELLNESS IN FLOW.

Empowering Adolescent Girls.

For adolescent neurodivergent girls aged 13–22.
Focus track: girls aged 13–18
Caregivers (parents and guardians)

WHO ARE WE

Talk to Mutendwah Foundation (Soc/77981) is a community-driven humanitarian initiative founded by a team of counsellors committed to advancing mental health, menstrual health, and overall wellbeing for adolescent girls.

We work to promote dignity, inclusion, and access to accurate health information—particularly for neurodivergent adolescents—through safe, empowering, and supportive spaces.

WHERE WE WORK

Our programs are currently implemented across:

- Nairobi County
- Kitui County
- Makueni County

These regions reflect both urban and rural contexts, allowing us to address diverse challenges such as period poverty, limited access to health information, and cultural stigma.

OUR FOCUS:
WELLNESS IN FLOW

Wellness in Flow is a holistic initiative integrating:

- Menstrual and reproductive health education.
- Nutrition for hormonal balance.
- Mental and emotional wellbeing.
- Caregiver engagement and support.
- Inclusion of neurodivergent adolescents.

We recognize that hormonal health is interconnected with nutrition, stress, and environment. Through guided sessions, we equip girls and caregivers with practical knowledge to support healthier cycles and overall wellbeing.

Community Conversation Theme.

HOW DID WE GET HERE?

Behind phrases like “just cramps” are millions of girls silently enduring pain that is dismissed or misunderstood. This leads to:

- School absenteeism.
- Withdrawal from opportunities.
- Reduced confidence and participation.

Menstrual pain can signal underlying conditions such as:

- Endometriosis.
- Polycystic Ovary Syndrome (PCOS).
- Uterine fibroids.
- Adenomyosis.
- Pelvic inflammatory disease (PID).
- Hormonal imbalances and anemia.

These are not normal period experiences—they require medical attention and proper diagnosis.

WHY THIS MATTERS

Conditions like endometriosis are chronic and life-altering, often leading to years of delayed diagnosis due to stigma and misinformation.
Too many girls are taught to normalize pain.
We are working to change that.

OUR APPROACH

Through storytelling, dialogue, and education, Wellness in Flow:

- Creates safe spaces for open conversations.
- Encourages caregiver support without judgment.
- Centers inclusion for neurodivergent girls.
- Builds awareness of menstrual disorders and pain management.
- Encourages early health-seeking behavior and referrals.

We educate participants to recognize warning signs such as:

- Severe or worsening pain.
- Pain that disrupts daily life.
- Irregular or missed periods.
- Heavy or prolonged bleeding.

Early referral to healthcare providers is strongly encouraged.

OUR VISION & EXPECTED OUTCOMES

- Reduce school absenteeism linked to menstrual challenges.
- Lower adolescent pregnancy rates through education.
- Increase confidence and agency among girls.
- Promote inclusive health education.
- Develop sustainable, community-led solutions to period poverty.

ENGAGING CAREGIVERS.

We support caregivers to:

- Break myths and stigma.
- Communicate openly and supportively.
- Recognize signs that require medical attention.
- Understand neurodivergent needs.
- Encourage timely care-seeking.

Parents and caregivers play a critical role in shaping how girls understand their bodies.

ENGAGING BOYS FOR LASTING CHANGE

We include boys and young men because:

- Awareness reduces stigma and harmful behaviors.
- Boys become allies in building equitable communities.
- Supportive peers improve girls' wellbeing and education outcomes.

OUR COMMITMENT.

We are building a future where:

- No girl suffers in silence
- Pain is recognized and treated early.

Menstruation is not a barrier to education
Every girl—regardless of ability—has access to dignified, inclusive health support.
